Weiyu (Nick) Chen

New York City | (917) 815-2210 | chen.nick.dev@gmail.com
Linkedin | Github | Portfolio

Before making my transition into software engineering, I worked as a store manager, Election Day worker, US Census supervisor, and direct support professional roles that have helped improve multiple communities across NYC.

I always look to reflect and seek a bigger challenge in life, motivating me to learn software engineering. Technology has the power to impact lives at a level and scale that has never been achieved in human history. The idea that an impressive tool like Google Search and React Library we create can influence everyone across the world now, or in the future is what encourages my passion for technology.

I believe that my broad background is an asset as I take on a more technical role -- I'm frequently commended for leadership and communication skills. I'm excited to join a growing technology company where I can contribute right away and also continue to learn from experienced professionals. Thanks so much for your time and consideration!